Q16 As the region changes demographically, municipal tax structures may also have to change. Traditionally, second-home owners who reside elsewhere most of the year have carried a large share of the tax burden, reducing the cost to local residents. When second-homes convert to permanent homes this advantage is, to some extent at least, lost. Others feel too much of the tax burden is placed on second-home owners and some feel property taxes are too burdensome, especially for older residents. However, shifting from property taxes to income/wage type would penalize local residents to the advantage of second-home owners. Please tell us your views on this subject.
